

The Medieval Chronicle, vol. X (2015)

CONTENTS

Contents	vi
Contributors	viii
Preface	x
James Howard-Johnston	1
The Chronicle and Other Forms of Historical Writing in Byzantium
Pauline Stafford	23
Noting Relations and Tracking Relationships in English Vernacular Chronicles, Late Ninth to Early Twelfth Century
Eduardo Fabbro	49
‘Capitur urbs quae totum cepit orbem’: The Fates of the Sack of Rome (410) in Early Medieval Historiography
Chris Jones	69
Perspectives from the Periphery: French Kings and their Chroniclers
Courtney Konshuh	95
Fighting with a lytle werode : Alfred’s Retinue in the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle
Guy Lurie	119
French Citizenship and the Uprisings of 1380–1383
Roger Nicholson	141
‘Confundit Omnia’: Constructing Treason in the Late Medieval London Chronicles
Angel Nicolaou-Konnari	163
Leontios Makhairas’s Greek Chronicle of the ‘Sweet Land of Cyprus’: History of Manuscripts and Intellectual Links
Douglas Whalin	203
Bede and the Syriac Chroniclers: Interactions of Subject and Genre in Contemporaneous Historiography
Review	223
John Page’s ‘The Siege of Rouen’ , edited by Joanna Bellis (Chris Given-Wilson)
Heather Pagan and Geert De Wilde	225
The Anglo-Norman Prose Chronicle of Early British Kings or the Abbreviated Prose Brut : Text and Translation	